Arab conference recommends upgrading civil service sector

Participants in the First Arab Civil Service Conference, hosted by the Jordanian capital on May 15-16, called for upgrading systems of this sector in the Arab countries to enhance efficiency and productivity. Development of this sector warrants habilitation of manpower and continuing training of staff, called the conferees at conclusion of the meeting, late on Wednesday. Dr. Ahmad Bozbar, an eminent Kuwaiti specialist in administrative affairs, presented a work paper at the conference, essentially calling for management of the public sector "with mentality of the private sector." Arab Governments, he said, should engage civil associations and adopt an approach of development and change to achieve development in this field, he said. The Kuwaiti delegation that took part in the conference included the assistant undersecretary for administrative development at the Civil Service Commission, Nabil Al-Me'jel. Representatives of the UAE and Jordan also addressed the conference calling for new methods to develop the sector.
