Jordanian manufacturer seals first ever deal in Middle East with Siemens

Jordanian manufacturer Petra Engineering Industries Company on Monday signed the first ever deal in Jordan with international company Siemens to supply smart heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) systems and equipment's. During the signing ceremony at Petra's industrial facilities, 30km southeast of Amman, the company uncovered that this deal is Siemens' first ever in the Middle East region. Petra Vice Chairman and President of the Jordanian Exporters Association Omar Abu Wishah told The Jordan Times that the German giant, Siemens, has signed only one other similar deal with a Chinese company. This is the second ever for Siemens worldwide, he noted. Under the contract, Siemens will supply Petra with the building technology and software to develop a line of smart HVAC and building management systems. These systems are based on the Siemens Controllers platforms, and are to be marketed by Petra in over 40 markets worldwide, a statement by the company said

Airlines allowed to resume use of Syrian airspace

The Civil Aviation Regulatory Commission (CARC) on Monday granted Jordanian airlines permission to fly in Syrian airspace, seven years after banning the use of the airspace in 2012. In a statement carried by the Jordan News Agency, Petra, the CARC stipulated that airline companies wishing to fly in Syrian airspace must present an evaluation study of flight risk, use a specified air route and altitude and take necessary precautions to ensure that safety is maximized. The CARC added that it is still evaluating the conditions of Syrian airports, especially the Damascus International Airport. In January, the CARC sent a technical delegation that employed international standards of evaluation to assess the risks associated with flying in Syrian airspace, according to Petra.
