Jaber crossing with Syria to be closed over virus concerns

Citing concerns over becoming a coronavirus hotspot, the government on Wednesday decided to close the Jaber border crossing with Syria for one week as of Thursday. The decision was announced on Wednesday during a ministerial meeting during which Interior Minister Salameh Hammad said that the decision to close the border crossing with Syria was taken upon a recommendation from health authorities. The country saw a rise in the number of locally transmitted coronavirus cases with almost all of them were registered at the northern border crossing with Syria, which is reported to have large number of COVID-19 cases.
