Parliamentary committee says final report on RJ in preparation

The parliamentary committee looking into a number of issues related to Royal Jordanian (RJ) said it will refer a detailed report to the Lower House for a decision. Head of the House's Public Services and Transport Committee MP Khaled Abu Hassan said that the report will be referred to the chamber once all issues in question are "verified with concerned agencies", the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. Without elaborating further on the nature of the issues verified by the committee, Abu Hassan said the committee's work was centred primarily around safeguarding the public interests and the "symbolic value" of RJ, according to Petra. In response to what it described as "rumours" circulated on social media, the government has recently posted a clarification on the "Haggak Tiraf" (in English "your right to know") online platform, saying that a five-week investigation by the Integrity and Anti-Corruption Commission (IACC) found that the procedures applied in the restructuring of RJ by the government of former prime minister Abdullah Ensour were "all sound".

Amman to host third FinTech summit in June

The Moments INNOVATION platform is scheduled to hold the third edition of the FinTech summit in the Kingdom in June, under the theme: "The future of banks and financial institutions in the age of modern technologies". The summit will address several issues related to strategies, laws and mechanisms in the financial technology sector for their importance as the main drivers for the growth of commercial, financial, banking and insurance activities, according to a platform statement carried by the Jordan News Agency, Petra. The 2019 summit is scheduled to attract speakers from big financial groups, entrepreneur companies and start-ups in the technology field from the region and the world, where the event is planned to welcome 300 experts and speakers of senior CEOs and managers of local and regional banks.

Fuel sector employs 10,000 workers — official

President of the Energy and Minerals Regulatory Commission Council Farouq Hiyari on Sunday said that the sector employs 10,000 workers through 580 petrol stations, 976 gas distribution agents. In a press statement, Hiyari affirmed the commission's keenness to provide a legislative environment and keep up with modern technology to improve the sector's services and serve the interests of all people in this industry. He added, following a meeting with representatives of Gas Stations Owners Association, that the stakeholders discussed ways of regulating performance and facilitating measures, in addition to bridging the gap between the private and public sectors to achieve investors' interests and ensure consumers' rights.
